

Torch Can Change Lives. Torch Scholars Can Change the World.

About the Torch Scholars Program

Northeastern University's Torch Scholars Program is a bold and innovative endeavor that empowers students to put their ability and will to succeed into action. Each year, the program provides hardworking, first-generation college students with full scholarships and support from their peers and community. These students have persevered despite limited financial resources, challenging family situations, or unfavorable educational environments. While Torch candidates have not yet reached their full academic potential, they demonstrate great promise and would succeed at Northeastern with individualized academic support.

Program Support

Torch is dedicated to providing that support with:

- › A scholarship that covers tuition, campus housing, food, course materials, and fees for up to eight semesters of undergraduate study.
- › A four-week, comprehensive college readiness program held the summer prior to the first year of college.
- › Intensive academic planning and assessments, including a time-to-degree plan to help Torch Scholars graduate on time.
- › In-depth professional mentoring from staff, faculty, and alumni.
- › Student development workshops.
- › One-on-one meetings with academic advisors to develop skills in self-advocacy, communication, study habits, and goal setting.
- › Social events to foster group identity and camaraderie.

Torch Scholars participate in professional co-op experiences, global experiences, athletics, student clubs, and more, allowing them to explore their passions, expand their global horizons, and become stronger leaders. They form tight community bonds and work with other Torch Scholars and Torch alumni to succeed as a team.

"My advisors at Torch have guided me through academic decisions, offered valuable advice about college, and supported me through personal challenges as a first-generation college student. Torch has played a key role in helping me find my place and shaping my personal journey."

Who Is a Torch Scholar?

Torch Scholars are game changers who work to make a difference within their communities. They show leadership in their jobs, at school, or through service to their communities and represent a variety of interests, backgrounds, and hometowns. Recognizing that a student's GPA may not tell the full story of their potential to succeed in college, we seek Torch candidates who have taken a challenging high school course load and have enrolled in college preparatory classes.

Candidates must be first-generation college students whose parents or guardians do not have a U.S. undergraduate degree or its equivalent. Students must be eligible for federal financial aid and demonstrate high need on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

What to Expect

All candidates for the Torch Scholars Program must submit their Common Application or Coalition Application, Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), CSS Profile, and any required supporting financial aid documents to Northeastern University. A Torch nomination form must be submitted by a nonfamily member (such as a teacher, employer, or community leader) who knows the candidate on a personal level and is prepared to talk about the candidate's family responsibilities, motivation, and college readiness.

The selection committee will review application and nomination materials, then invite finalists to participate in an interview day.

Finalists receive their admission decisions by April 1.
